-MCNICHOLS-

In the flood tide to prosperity, with the deserving—What a lady says:
Pec-cake, pat-a-cake, baker's man, Write me a letter as fast as you can,
Press it and roll it and fill it with nickels,
And post it away to the Only McNichols!
Tell him our new house is barren and bare,
With never a sofa, a bed or a chair;
With never a carpet or curtain or brackest;
That misson is making a terrible racket.
She says to me, "Daniel, you cannot afford To rent in the West End apartments and board Go down to McNichols, who sells very cheap; His fine list of bargains we may as well reap.
Yes, Sir-ee! This is the talk you hear right along. McNichols, the poet, secures the patronage of the ladies every time. He takes the confectionery in this line. Trade-mark:

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.
CINCINNATI, March 28.—The news of the sentencing of Wm. Berner, the confessed murderer of William H. Kirk, for twenty years in the Penitentiary, which was published in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, although every effort was made to keep the fact quiet, spread like wild-fire through the city yesterday, and it was soon became known that an organization was being perfected among the Germans, whose object was to inflict the death penalty upon the prisoner. A meeting was called at the Music Hall for the evening, and towards the hour of opening crowds of people surged through the streets and entered the building. Dr. A. C. Kemper was called to the chair, and made an address, in which he deplored the prevalence of murder throughout the country, and the facility with which the murderers escaped punishment for their crimes. He was frequently interrupted by the cry of "Lynch Berner."
"On to the Jail," and other wild utterances, which showed that the crowd was quite impatient of the delay caused by listening to the speech. Other addresses by General Hickenlooper and Judge Carter follow Dr. Kemper's, but finally the patience of the mob gave way, and with wild shouts of "To the Jail," they moved out into the street and marched in a solid body in the direction indicated. On the way there they made a brief halt at a blacksmith's shop, which the leaders entered, taking from it a quantity of tools with which to open the Jail doors should their entrance be resisted. Not much resistance was offered them, and the work of getting into the Jail was proceeded with in a cool and systematic manner. While this was going on the authorities were acting promptly and decisively.
Sheriff Hawkins had obtained entrance to the Jail building with a number of his deputies, and the First Regiment of the Ohio National Guard were being mustered to gain possession of the building in advance of the mob, if possible.

THE MOB
got into the Jail first, however, and were immediately ordered under arrest by the police and deputy sheriffs, who made one or two arrests, but were soon compelled to succumb to superior numbers. When the military entered the Jail by way of the front entrance of the Court House and a tunnel under the building, they found the mob in possession and mad with excitement and disappointment over their failure to find Berner, who had been removed from the city immediately after sentence. The appearance of the military had the effect of reducing the mob to temporary submission, but gradually they concentrated their forces in front of the Jail and listened to impromptu incendiary speeches, which worked them up again to a spirit of fury. At about midnight they began to make demonstrations of a very serious nature, firing revolvers and throwing bricks and stones at the police and militia, seriously injuring several of them, and fatally wounding Officer Nunn, whose chest was crushed with a boulder, and Militiaman Cooke, who was shot in the breast.
The militia finally fired a volley over the heads of the rioters, which had the effect of fanning them for a short time, several of the mob being wounded and one of them named Wm. Kates, a laborer, being instantly killed, while he was taking part in the work of breaking down the inner door between the Jail reception-room and the interior.
For a few moments the leaders rallied around the dead body and made stirring appeals to their followers to join them in a rush upon the cell-room, but the sight of the dead man stretched across the passage acted as a wholesome restraint and the mob fell suddenly back, its spirit apparently

THE LARGEST, LIGHTEST AND BEST ARRANGED WAREROOMS IN THE CITY.

The fact that a policy of yielding to force applied in this peculiar way resulted from the Breckenwold outrage impressed itself upon the minds of all concerned, and it was generally confessed that there was not for this occurrence there could be nothing in the way of concession from the British Parliament to Irish agitation.

The Bremerhaven affair, a few years afterwards attracted the attention of the Fenian Brotherhood in America, who employed a German chemist as a spy to make some clockwork use in this style of warfare. He fled the order, but betrayed his employers and the matter was exposed. The chemist was hanged and it was then determined to found a school of instruction for apostles of the dynamite dispensation in New York, where the school was held in three or four branches of the chemistry of war. The school was on the Hudson River and experiments were constantly conducted there until the time that the school was discovered—tri- nitro-glycerine—for which he recovered more extensive powers of destruction

JUSTUS H. SCHWAB.

Justus H. Schwab is correct in describing himself as an advocate of the social revolution. He is social and revolutionary in everything. He was born in 1847 in Frankfort-on-Maine, and has been associated with the movement so long that he is now regarded for his first entry upon political life. In 1863 he was an active worker in the agitation for the abolition of slavery in France, and was a member of the International and visited France, and which he left before the days of the Commune. He has since his home in New York, and devoted his home in New York country. While able to afford some degree of luxury as well as abundance at his meals, the agitator reduces his food to the barest level of his necessities, and devotes it hurriedly to his noble cause, without ceremony or appreciation of any act connected with it save that it is to be eaten. "I am not a man of ceremony," he says, "I am a social movement!" inquired of Mr. Schwab one who saw in the discomfort and almost squalor of the revolutionist's surroundings no indication

PATRICK J. SHERIDAN.

It is in connection with the Kilmainham treaty, as it is called, that P. J. Sheridan comes into his first notoriety. It was alleged in the English House of Commons that it was through him that Mr. Parnell disturbed the country when he wanted some telling act of agrarian outrage committed; at all events, it is as certain that it was by his agency and his Ribblesmen that the country was to be misled as a result of the negotiation that

If any of the companies in the Houston Encampment appear to better advantage than the Tredway Rifles of this city the will certainly have reason to be proud. When the Tredways drilled in New Orleans last year they were handicapped greatly by their appearance. Their old guns were marked up against them; their uniforms likewise, and it is said that if the drill of the Tredways alone had been considered the would have left New Orleans with prize money jingling in their pockets. They are taking precautions against a similar experience in Houston, as during the past week they entered from a Philadelphia tailoring establishment a measure of the member of the company for new uniforms. These uniforms are to be blue in color, the coat of a dark, tight-fitting, single-breasted frock, with brass and gold trimmings, gold epaulettes, white belt and cross-belt, regulation breeches and white shakos. It will be the handsomest uniforms in Mississippi. They are to be performed for the Southern trip. The company have ordered new guns also. These uniforms will not be seen by the public until just before the start of the season. When a hop and dress drill will be given. They will leave on the 3d of May and will take with them the Third Regiment drum corps, twenty-five members, under the command of Lieutenants C. D. Comfort will be the business manager. The boys are drilling five nights a week.

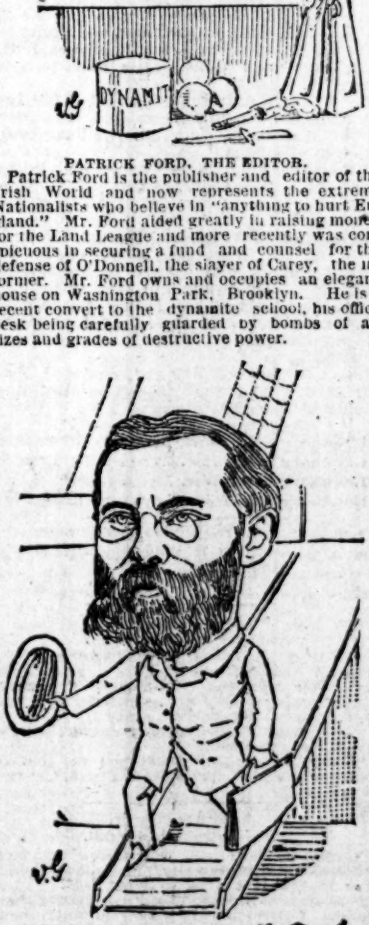

The detail of the drill is as follows: Sunday, March 30, Lieut. Wm. Shank; Monday, Lieut. E. S. Abadie; Tuesday, Lieut. W. H. Scott; Wednesday, Lieut. W. H. Scott; Thursday, Lieut. W. H. Scott; Friday, Capt. Robert Buchanan; Saturday, Capt. R. H. Tilley; Sunday, Capt. M. M. Fritz.

Last Monday evening, Companies A, B and C, of the Tredway Rifles, gave a battalion drill, Col. Butler commanding. Wednesday, Companies E, G and D under the command of Lieut. Col. Meier, drilled also. The drill was a very successful one, of merit and to the character of its attendance. The companies averaged about thirty-two men each. The other companies turned out about twenty-four men each.

Company G, First Regiment, Capt. Tilley commanding, put up a very fine drill at their last reception, which took place Tuesday evening, at the Houston Hotel.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 28.—Much excitement is now existing among the negroes of Burlington, N. J., a town on the Delaware, when for a week has been a series of masked medical students of the University of Pennsylvania, in the darkness, frightening women and abusing children, have wrought the negroes of the north and the place into a condition of terror, and this town is infected with a conviction that the medical students, who have sworn to expose the pickled piccanies in the place, and send them to Philadelphia.

streets after night have been frightened into convulsions, and young colored girls have been driven to their homes in terror. An alleged student upon Lewis street, a colored boy 12 years old, has brought the excitement to the verge of a panic.
In the darkness of the night, the boy, who is dark, with an air of ingenious veracity. His story, told in choice negro dialect, is to the effect that he was sent to a neighbor's a few nights ago, and that when he was at the end of a lane he saw a white man, named Jim Brady, who was
